

The book was found

Fountains In The Sand (Annotated): Rambles Among The Oases Of Tunisia

Synopsis

“The proposition tempted me; it is not every day that one is invited in such gentlemanly fashion to wallow on all fours with young Arabs.” The traveller Temple was struck, at Nefta, with the beauty of its oëdesart nymphs, whose eyes are all fire and brilliancy, and he might have said the same of the boys. As the above quotations from Norman Douglas’s Fountains in the Sand attest, one need not strain one’s eyes too much reading between the lines to find the homoerotic in his travel writing. Once found, it is generally of the pederastic nature. An Austrian-born Scott, Douglas spent much of his adult life traveling the world partially to see it and partially to escape the law in whatever country he recently had departed. Although he married his cousin in 1898 and fathered two sons (the marriage later ended in divorce), the year before that marriage he was having an affair not only with a mistress but also her fifteen-year-old brother. In 1916, Douglas fled England to, in his own words, “avoid persecution for kissing a boy and giving him some cakes and a shilling.” The sixteen-year-old boy in question described the matter less innocently to police, leading Douglas to be charged with indecent assault. Douglas settled in Capri. His book of travel Together, published in 1923, finds him traveling with a companion he refers to as “Mr R,” who in fact was a fifteen-year-old Italian boy who went by the name of Renf. Douglas was admired by E.M. Forster and Lytton Strachey (“the thrill that only you can give goes down my back,” Strachey wrote to him after reading Together), and more recently by Paul Fussell, who likens him to Nabokov. D.H. Lawrence was fascinated with Douglas enough to base the character James Argyle on him in Aaron’s Rod. Indeed, Lawrence uses Argyle to make one of his more profound statements on love between men, the same sort of statement found in the final pages of Women in Love. Addressing the Marchesse, Argyle says, “A man is drawn or driven. Driven, I’ve found it. Ah, my dear fellow, what is life but a search for a friend that sums it up.” The Marchesse smiles and adds, “Or a lover,” to which Argyle rejoins, “Same thing, same thing.” An even more intriguing characterization of Douglas is found in Roger Williams’s Lunch with Elizabeth David. The book is written from the point of view of twelve-year-old Eric Wolton, a working class boy Douglas took with him through Calabria. In Julie Gray’s review of the book for the New York Times (13 Aug 2000), she writes, “The question at the novel’s center concerns Douglas: Is he, as one character puts it, oëa monster, the pedophile of the century, or is he, as Eric says, a great man who had led him into a warm and sensuous world of adventures and light? Eric, no doubt, would insist he should have the final word. As for Douglas, his final words, after intentionally taking an overdose of pills to end a prolonged illness, are reported to have been: “Get those fucking nuns away from me.”

Book Information

File Size: 730 KB

Print Length: 169 pages

Page Numbers Source ISBN: 1535169575

Publisher: Watersgreen House (September 30, 2014)

Publication Date: September 30, 2014

Language: English

ASIN: B00O32M8HE

Text-to-Speech: Enabled

X-Ray: Not Enabled

Word Wise: Enabled

Lending: Not Enabled

Screen Reader: Supported

Enhanced Typesetting: Enabled

Best Sellers Rank: #1,955,035 Paid in Kindle Store (See Top 100 Paid in Kindle Store) #39

in Books > Travel > Africa > Tunisia #61 in Kindle Store > Kindle eBooks > Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual & Transgender eBooks > Travel #117 in Books > Gay & Lesbian > Travel

Customer Reviews

Was NOT expecting to find such a wicked sense of humor in this decades-old travelogue. NOT politically correct, by today's standards, but entertaining nonetheless.

Download to continue reading...

Fountains in the Sand (Annotated): Rambles Among the Oases of Tunisia The lost oases: Being a narrative account of the author's explorations into the more remote parts of the Libyan Desert and his rediscovery of two lost oases, Walks and Rambles on the Delmarva Peninsula: A Guide for Hikers and Naturalists (Walks & Rambles Guides) Walks and Rambles on Cape Cod and the Islands: A Nature Lover's Guide to 35 Trails (Second Edition) (Walks & Rambles) Walks and Rambles in and around St. Louis (Walks & Rambles Guides) Walks and Rambles on Long Island: A Nature-Lover's Guide to 30 Scenic Trails (Walks & Rambles) Aquatic Gardens Ponds, Streams, Waterfalls & Fountains: Volume 2. Maintenance, Maintenance, Livestock, & Example Systems (Aquatic Gardens: Streams, Waterfalls & Fountains) Fountains in the Sand (Oxford Paperbacks)

Sand Dollar, Sand Dollar: Tagalog & English Dual Text Live Sand Secrets: A Dialog on Living Sand Filtration The Handbook of Tunisian Arabic: A manual of Arabic as Spoken in Tunisia for Travelers and Students (Explore Tunisia's Culture Through its Language 1) Tunisia through a Camera Lens (A photographic journey through Tunisia) Ifriqiya: Thirteen Centuries of Art and Architecture in Tunisia (Museum With No Frontiers International Exhibition Cycle : Islamic Art in the Mediterranean : Tunisia) Tunisia (Insight Guide Tunisia) Insight Guides Tunisia (Insight Guide Tunisia) Burton Holmes Travelogues, Vol. 2: Cities of the Barbary Coast, Oases of the Algerian Sahara, Southern Spain Handbook for Travellers in Egypt: Including Descriptions of the Course of the Nile Through Egypt and Nubia, Alexandria, Cairo, the Pyramids, and ... the Oases, the Fyoom, &C (Classic Reprint) Among The Faithful: Tunisia in the 1920s The Annotated Mona Lisa: A Crash Course in Art History from Prehistoric to Post-Modern (Annotated Series) The Annotated Luther, Volume 5: Christian Life in the World (Annotated Luther)

Contact Us

DMCA

Privacy

FAQ & Help